Dear Wife

The Girls arrived home this morning all right. The woman has gone and Emma is duly enconced. She thinks she can do the work well enough. I send you your Uncle's letter with receipts to sign if you are willing. I think he is rather exacting to want receipts before sending the money but probably you had better sign them and take the chances. you can order the money sent to me or to Frank whichever you please and the receipts to me so I can put Emmas with them. Emma

Says you talk of coming up in a week or two. we will treat you to the best we have when you come that is if you behave your self pretty well we expect some very nice meals now we have a new cook so come on with your company we will try and amuse them

Yours truly
